a biologist and an anthropologist use evolutionary biology to explain the causes and inform the prevention of rape in this controversial book. Randy Thornhill and Craig Palmer use evolutionary biology to explain the causes of rape and to recommend new approaches to its prevention. According to Thornhill and Palmer, evolved adaptation of some sort gives rise to rape. The main evolutionary question is whether rape is an adaptation itself or a by-product of other adaptations. Regardless of the answer, Thornhill and Palmer note that rape circumvents a central feature of women's reproductive strategy: mate choice. This is a primary reason why rape is devastating to its victims, especially young women. Thornhill and Palmer address and claim to demolish scientifically many myths about rape bred by social science theory. Over the past twenty-five years, the popular contention that rapists are not motivated by sexual desire is, they argue, scientifically inaccurate. Although they argue that rape is biological, Thornhill and Palmer do not view it as inevitable. Their recommendations for rape prevention include teaching young males not to rape, punishing rape more severely, and studying the effectiveness of chemical castration. They also recommend that young women consider the biological causes of rape when making decisions about dress, appearance, and social activities. Rape could cease to exist, they argue, only in a society knowledgeable about its evolutionary causes. The book includes a useful summary of evolutionary theory and a comparison of evolutionary biology's and social science's explanations of human behavior. The authors argue for the greater explanatory power and practical usefulness of evolutionary biology. The book is sure to stir up discussion both on the specific topic of rape and on the larger issues of how we understand and influence human behavior.

most americans regard the postwar occupation of japan as a prime example of american magnanimity they are blithely unaware of the prevailing japanese myth that upon entering japan u s servicemen engaged in an orgy of looting sexual violence and drunken brawling and that during the first ten days of the occupation there were 1 336 reported cases of rape in kanagawa prefecture alone the myth goes further with claims that u s military officers demanded the japanese government set up brothels for use by american troops and that when embarrassed officials in washington d c forced occupation officials to close the brothels the servicemembers went on a rampage resulting in according to official records reported rapes of japanese women skyrocketing from an average of 40 to 330 cases a day the truth is that none of this happened nevertheless large numbers of japanese still believe these allegations as the passions of war have faded the currency of such stories has only grown and they are now regarded by many as fact this false narrative of mass sexual violence and the organized exploitation of japanese women by american military forces is also widely accepted among

Cracking the Code: 110 Minutes – A Journey into Time Conversion

Have you ever been engrossed in a captivating movie, only to glance at the clock and realize you've spent 110 minutes? That's a significant chunk of time! But how much is that in hours? Understanding time conversions, particularly converting minutes to hours, is a fundamental skill with practical applications far beyond simply tracking movie lengths. This article will delve into the intricacies of converting 110 minutes to hours, providing you with not just the answer, but a comprehensive understanding of the process and its real-world relevance.

Understanding the Fundamentals: Minutes and Hours

Before we tackle 110 minutes specifically, let's lay the groundwork. Time is measured in various units, with minutes and hours being the most commonly used. The fundamental relationship between these two units is: $60 \text{ minutes} = 1 \text{ hour}$. This is the cornerstone of all our calculations. Remember this simple equation, and converting between minutes and hours becomes a straightforward process.

Converting 110 Minutes to Hours: The Calculation

Now, let's apply our fundamental understanding to convert 110 minutes into hours. Since there are 60 minutes in an hour, we can use division to find out how many hours are in 110 minutes: $110 \text{ minutes} / 60 \text{ minutes/hour} = 1.8333\ldots$ hours. This calculation shows that 110 minutes is equal to 1.8333... hours. The decimal portion represents the fraction of an hour.

Deciphering the Decimal: Minutes and Seconds

The decimal part of our answer, 0.8333..., represents the remaining minutes that don't make up a full hour. To convert this decimal into minutes and seconds, we can perform the following calculations: 1. Find the remaining minutes: Multiply the decimal part by 60 (since there are 60 minutes in an hour): $0.8333\ldots \times 60 \approx 50$ minutes. 2. (Optional) Find the remaining seconds (for greater precision): If you need a more precise answer, you can take the remaining decimal portion from the minute calculation and multiply it by 60 again (since there are 60 seconds in a minute). However, for most practical purposes, 50 minutes is sufficiently accurate. Therefore, 110 minutes is approximately equal to 1 hour and 50 minutes.

Real-World Applications: Where Time Conversions Matter

Understanding time conversion isn't just an academic exercise; it's a practical skill used in numerous everyday situations: Scheduling: Planning your day effectively requires converting time units. Knowing that a meeting lasts 110 minutes helps you allocate the correct amount of time in your schedule. Travel Planning: Calculating travel times, especially when dealing with different time zones, necessitates accurate time conversions. Cooking: Many recipes specify cooking times in minutes; being able to quickly convert these to hours can be invaluable. Project Management: Estimating the time needed for a project often involves working with minutes and hours, requiring accurate conversions for proper planning and resource allocation. Sports and Games: Understanding game durations and time-outs often involves working with minutes and their conversion to hours or other time units.

Beyond 110 Minutes: Mastering Time Conversion

The method we used to convert 110 minutes to hours can be applied to any minute-to-hour conversion. Simply divide the total number of minutes by 60. Remember to deal with the resulting decimal portion to express the remaining time in minutes and seconds if needed.

Summary

Converting 110 minutes to hours demonstrates a fundamental skill in time management and mathematical understanding. By understanding the relationship between minutes and hours (60 minutes = 1 hour), we can easily calculate that 110 minutes is equivalent to approximately 1 hour and 50 minutes. This simple conversion has broad applications in various aspects of daily life, from scheduling appointments to planning complex projects. Mastering this skill allows for efficient time management and improved planning capabilities.

Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs)

1. Can I use a calculator for this conversion? Absolutely! Calculators significantly simplify the process, especially when dealing with larger numbers. 2. What if I need to convert hours to minutes? To convert hours to minutes, simply multiply the number of hours by 60. 3. Are there any online tools for time conversions? Yes, many websites and apps offer time conversion tools to quickly convert between different units of time. 4. Why is the answer not exactly 1 hour and 50 minutes? The result of $110/60$ is a repeating decimal (1.8333...). 1 hour and 50 minutes is an approximation; the exact result would include an infinitely repeating decimal for the seconds. 5. What if I have a time expressed in hours, minutes, and seconds? How do I convert it to minutes? Convert the hours to minutes (multiply by 60), add the existing minutes, and then convert the seconds to minutes (divide by 60) and add this value. This will give you the total time in minutes.
